Joulé Celebrates New Jersey's Staffing Employee Week Key Economic Data Shows Contribution of Staffing Industry

Edison, NJ, September 4, 2009 – Recognizing the significant contribution by the staffing industry and temporary employees to the U.S. and New Jersey economy, New Jersey Governor Jon S. Corzine proclaimed the state's Staffing Employee Week from September 14th through 20th, 2009.

Joulé's family of staffing companies joins together to celebrate the proclamation. Recognizing a number of key contributions brought by our industry's employees and client companies, Joulé believes flexible staffing is the solution and opportunity needed for New Jersey businesses and residents:

- More than 70,000 people are currently employed daily by New Jersey's staffing companies.
- 373,000 people were employed over the course of 2008 by New Jersey's staffing companies.
- Staffing employment offers flexibility to both employees and businesses, providing options for employees as to when, where and how they want to work; in turn, businesses benefit from the skills of temporary employees during busy times.
- Nine out of ten companies, ranging from small local businesses to major corporations use temporary help services for their additional staffing needs because of the immediate response in filling business needs.
- New Jersey staffing companies provide free training for thousands of assigned employees to help meet today's demand for skilled workers and provide businesses with efficient, qualified people to solve temporary staff shortages.

These are just snapshots of the many economic advantages brought about by New Jersey's staffing industry. As a regional specialty staffing leader, Joulé is committed to continually improving its service to client businesses, delivering customized hiring solutions and bringing more job opportunities for its employees in the years to come.

As recession eases, local businesses that need to add staff but are still concerned about long-term sustainability will call on staffing companies like Joulé. For these companies, temporary staffing is the perfect human resource solution to help meet their immediate and short-term needs for skilled technical and non-technical staff without being locked into a long-term commitment. For the unemployed, Joulé and the rest of the staffing industry offer them an opportunity to reenter the labor market, explore new work environments, generate weekly income and gain valuable work experience.
